A linear motion guide device is used for various kinds of sliding and rolling purposes in association with a linear motion rolling guide unit used for an automotive production line and the like, as well as a component of a semiconductor manufacturing apparatus, a precision machine, and the like. The linear motion guide device includes a stationary guide rail attached to a base body, a slider slidably attached to the guide rail, a plurality of rolling members arranged between the guide rail and the slider, and so on. More specifically, in the linear motion guide unit, a plurality of rolling members each including a hard ball and so on are engaged with a retainer between the guide rail and the slider. The guide rail is arranged at an axial central portion of the slider while being fixed to the base body. The slider is arranged in a manner separated from the guide rail. Thereby, the rolling members are arranged between the guide rail and the slider. The slider includes a casing, a plurality of balls held by the retainer and so on arranged between an inner surface of the casing and the guide rail, and so on. A seal ring is arranged around the inner surface of the casing to prevent leakage of external lubricating oil that lubricates the rolling members. In order to prevent the seal ring from attaching to the casing, a slider side seal ring (SSR) including a seal lip is arranged at a leading end of the inner surface of the casing, and a leading end edge of the SSR is brought into contact with a seal ring side seal ring (SR) arranged on the base body to prevent attachment of the SSR to the casing. In addition, a middle seal lip is arranged at a middle portion of the inner surface of the casing in a longitudinal direction of the casing. When the slider slides in the guide rail, the balls roll while being ab
