developed in the United StatesLaurie Browning Laurie Browning (born 25 July 1967 in Adelaide, South Australia) is an Australian actress, best known as a regular cast member on the Nine Network's television soap opera Neighbours. Career Browning is a graduate of the National Institute of Dramatic Art. Browning began her career in the role of student nurse Nicky Pettinger on the Seven Network's drama series Prisoner in 1986. Her first major role was as a principal character in Channel Ten's A Country Practice. Browning has appeared in theatre, film and television. She has often played the role of a strong, independent woman and is comfortable with playing such a role. She describes herself as someone who is "deeply emotional" and "I'm a complete softie". Browning was one of several cast members to leave Neighbours in 1993. She was originally going to star in a short-lived television drama series titled The Lighthouse in Australia, but the series was cancelled.
Browning went on to play a regular role in the Nine Network series My Parents Are Dead from 1997–2001. She also appeared as Nat King Cole's sister-in-law, Terry, in the Seven Network's The Glass House. Browning then starred in the Nine Network's The Saddle Club as Kelly McKeon, an aspiring writer, and was later a regular co-host of the show's travel segment. She has also appeared in the television series Move Along and several mini series, including The Double, Striking Distance, Cover Story and The Sandman. Browning played the role of Samantha in the 2000 film version of the play The Age of Consent and its sequel. She had a lead role as the receptionist, Kim, in the 2002 television series Moonlight. She starred as Roxie Hart in the 2004 television film based on the case of accused murderess of her lover's wife, Velma Kelly.
Browning starred in the soap opera Sons and Daughters as main cast member, Margot Robinson, from late 2005 to 2007.
In late 2007 Browning started playing the role of "Reggie", wife of Regan Kelly (Ryan Moloney) in Home and Away
