Speed up the performance of your Windows 10 PC or laptop with a free upgrade to the updated version of Windows 10. We can finally say goodbye to Windows 8, or we can, if you're willing to shell out $119. The biggest change in the new Windows 10 is the fact that it is the first time Microsoft have offered a "one size fits all" operating system. Windows 10 now includes the latest Windows 10 Technical Preview now with the October Update, but it's a huge upgrade for your desktop PC or laptop. The upgrade gives a clean new Windows experience, including a redesigned Start Menu and more built-in apps, which is why it has caused so much controversy in the tech industry. If you're running Windows 7, you can get Windows 10 for free with an upgrade to Windows 10, but if you've already started the free upgrade for Windows 7 you will need to spend $119 for the upgrade to Windows 10 before you can run the OS. This upgrade doesn't mean you'll be forced to upgrade, but it will speed up the performance of your Windows PC. Here's everything you need to know about Windows 10: Windows 10 is the biggest upgrade to Windows 8 and Windows 8.1 in the world. First launched in Technical Preview form as "Windows 10" a few weeks ago, Microsoft have adopted a new OS licensing regime for the new operating system. It's free to Microsoft's most loyal users, but if you want to try it, you'll need to buy a new copy of Windows. If you have Windows 10 Professional or Windows 10 Enterprise on Windows 7, Windows 8 or Windows 8.1, you have the option to upgrade to Windows 10 through Microsoft's Windows website, but it won't be free. You'll need to shell out anywhere from £119 to £199 to get Windows 10. There are also three other different upgrade options through Windows on Demand, but they won't be free. There is a paid option for a Windows 10 enterprise edition or an IT Pro licence, and there is an optional "personal edition" which will cost up to £299 and is ideal for education or businesses who only want Windows 10 on desktop devices. There is a free option for Windows 10 Home Edition or Windows 10 student.
