
who want to follow you. Answer posts. Rinse and repeat. Actually, the very first thing I did after I started This Old Dog was to create a blog. And a Facebook page. Why? Because you're going to have to interact with people. You're going to have to do something that will make them want to read your blog. First, you have to get their attention. Google is very smart. And they know when they see you talking to people on other sites that something is going on. So they have a very good idea who to send people to. The only way to know what Google wants is to spend some time on Google. For Facebook, the best and fastest way to get people to your page is to make your page the first to respond to whatever Facebook is doing with new updates. That way you will get a percentage of new users. Here is some of the information that I found to help me get the most out of it. The first thing you will want to do is to create a Facebook account. Don't have one? Create one. I'm telling you the price you pay for not having one is going to look like you really don't want to be on the net. It is important to get a page or profile or whatever you are calling it. But then you need to make it personal. Here is some advice I found on the web: 1) Look at the images on Facebook. If you see someone with a face then you've found a friend. If you see a life form that doesn't have a face, move on. 2) Once you have friends, look for fan pages for your favorite bands, sports teams, etc. - you'll find that they have fan pages - that way you'll be a fan of them. Or just join and then be very active. 3) When you do, ask to be friended and then get on their page and welcome them back. Ask them questions and comment on the things you
