Which means many developers are not willing to fix the online bugs in their apps. End of Watch Friday, November 5, 1982.. St. Charles Parish Sheriff's responded to a public records request pertaining to an anti-Muslim training it co-hosted inQ: Is a VPS session safer than a physical server? Currently, I'm running a site on a Windows 7 VPS with Hyper-V. I'm not a seasoned sysadmin, but I'm pretty comfortable with programming and occasionally fix some broken things. My question is about securing my site (I'm using Apache) against malicious users. I know that any type of attack (or potential attack) can't be "solved" by use of a system (i.e. no antivirus software or user education can stop a determined attacker), but I'm just wondering if using a VPS is any safer than a physical server. I'm obviously going to use a combination of file permissions, user access, patches, firewalls, and intrusion detection. Perhaps more importantly, is there a way to tell if my VPS has been hacked? And if so, what can I do to prevent it from happening again? A: While there are a number of different potential attacks that a VPS may be susceptible to, the number of attributes that make a VPS more vulnerable is much lower than what you would find on a typical (non-virtualized) physical server. For instance: An attacker already has access to the data center if they can exploit a keylogger on your virtual

Q: Question regarding how display the "root" element of a resource tree I am working on creating a resource tree that stores tree nodes, which each contain a list of resources. The resources are 'structured' by a root element and a list of children. I am finding it difficult to display the root element while providing a list of children. I have included the code from my current approach below. The root element is getting displayed but the list elements are not. When I remove the root element everything displays properly. Here is what I am currently doing.

Q: How to add new column to pandas dataframe with same values as those in another column? I have a dataframe that looks like this: I want to create a new column, named 'star_ranks' and fill it with 0s based on the values in the 'star_rating' column (categorized as below): How can I achieve this with pandas? A: We first convert the column to numeric datatype and we use value_counts on star_rating and then assign a value to the new column based on the conditions:

df['star_ranks'] = df['star_rating'].astype(str).value_counts() df['star_ranks'] = df.groupby(['star_rating'])['star_rating'].transform(lambda x: '#' if x==x[0] else 0) print(df)
