Q: Which class to use from handlebars template for all javascript functions? For a project I will be using Handlebars to dynamically populate a series of objects with data from an API. In my handlebars template I will need to render a number of javascript functions that may be used in the main body of the project. Is it best practice to put all my functions in a single file to be accessed from the template? I'm concerned about performance issues due to traversing the DOM for each event or jQuery resources being used up. A: You can keep it in a single JS file. As long as it's not huge, it won't do much harm. I have been working with 800+ methods in one JS file which was over a few Kb. If you can, do it with AMD, like requireJS, it works really well. Here's an example: from sklearn.linear_model import LogisticRegression from sklearn.datasets import load_iris dataset = load_iris() X = dataset.data y = dataset.target model = LogisticRegression() model.fit(X, y) coef = model.coef_ So far so good. After that I want to calculate p-value: print(coef[0]) 0.4341639328288241 print(coef[1]) -0.70178409339813824 print(coef[0]+coef[1]) 3.396725360090541 print(coef[0]/coef[1]) 0.7381418709424802 p = 1.0 - e^(coef[0]/coef[1]) p -1.9567904095724646e-15 But this is wrong because 1.0-e^(-0.7383/0.7091) is 0.245645298, not 1. I am asking, is there a way to estimate the p value using mle? A: As you know, the probability density function of a
