Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus for inspecting for drying defects of sheet-shaped blanks to be used for metal can bodies and the like. 2. Description of the Prior Art As a known apparatus for inspecting for drying defects of such sheet-shaped blanks as used for metal can bodies, there is a rotary type in which the upper and lower dies are rotated and an X-Y type. Such a rotary type is disclosed in Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 54-124973 wherein the lower die is situated above the lower roller and the upper die is situated above the upper roller. According to this apparatus, the sheet is fed through the space between the lower and upper dies in such a manner as to allow the lower die to be pinched in the direction of the feeding by the lower roller which is in contact with the sheet and supported by the bottomed cylinder, the upper die is pressed onto the lower die and then the sheet is pinched between the lower and upper dies with the lower die and upper die rising. After the sheet is pinched between the dies, it is rotated and then the upper and lower dies are released from the sheet and then the sheet is conveyed to the next process. Another rotary type is disclosed in Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 55-131951 wherein the lower die is situated below the lower roller and the upper die is situated above the upper roller. A sheet to be dried is fed through the space between the lower and upper dies in such a manner as to allow the lower die to be pinched in the direction of the feeding by the lower roller which is in contact with the sheet and supported by the bottomed cylinder, the lower die is lowered and then the sheet is pinched by the lower and upper dies, and then the upper die is raised and the lower die is released from the sheet. However, the above-mentioned conventional apparatuses have a defect that foreign matters attached to the sheet become caught in the space between the lower and upper dies.
