When you send images to a magazine, use the most appropriate file format, such as TIFF, which enables the most editing after printing. Create a copy of each image before you start editing it. If you accidentally delete an image, you can get an exact copy of the original. If you are too lazy to make a copy of the image first, at least save it into your computer so you can come back to it later. Photoshop Elements Although you cannot create layers in Photoshop Elements, you can create virtual layers to simulate them. When you're doing such things as dividing one image into two different composites, sometimes you need a simulation of a layer so you can see what you've done. For instance, sometimes you just want to see the new image with the old image added onto it — in essence, splitting a picture into two. This type of editing is not realistic with a layer, but is easily done with Elements. Editing with layer-like elements Elements employs the technique of a "virtual layer." This layer does not exist outside of the program, but you can make it look like a layer. For example, you can break an image into the background and foreground, or you can separate your picture into different layers — as when you split a large image into three or four different sheets. When you break an image into foreground and background, you're dividing the image into two layers — by creating one called the background and the other, the foreground. In addition, you can create a layer called the mask, which is simply a duplicate of the layer that is your background. To see how this method works, here's an example of how you might split a large portrait from the background. Follow these steps to put together an image with separate layers: 1. Place your image onto the background, under the Background layer. This is the layer that contains the color of the background. 2. Choose Image⇒Adjustments⇒Separate Color. 3. Choose Foreground from the Process Lighting tab. 4. Repeat Steps 1–3 with the Background layer as the Foreground layer. 5. Choose Image⇒Adjustments⇒Separate Color. 6. Choose Mask from the Process Lighting tab. You now have two layers. Notice that your image has two composite layers, one for the foreground (the right side of the image) and one

Q: Gulp pipeline. How to use gulp-util? I have run into a pipeline problem, I have a gulpfile.js which involves concatenation, minification, adding script tags to the head of the html, but also retrieving a remote script and sending it to the client. I am using gulp-util to simplify loading my js and css files. I am still fairly new to node js and gulp so I've been going through the docs trying to figure this out. My most simplified version is this: `var gulp = require('gulp'); var util = require('gulp-util'); var concat = require('gulp-concat'); gulp.task('default', function() { return gulp.src('% static "assets/js/build/test.js" %') .pipe(concat('test.js')) .pipe(util.log('test.js', 'progress')) .pipe(gulp.dest('% static "assets/js/build" %')); });` However when I run it I get this error: `[gulp] Error: watch task failed EventEmitter.removeListener: 'test.js',`

The Maldives transport minister is appealing to Saudi Arabia, which is currently hosting Donald Trump's much-publicised meeting with leaders of 60 Muslim nations, to help win the release of a vessel seized there last week. Yameen Rasheed said on Saturday that he had asked the kingdom's king to intervene, and appealed for international support in an attempt to "restore our reputation". He also said he was "sorry" the people of the Maldives were not given access to the vessel to recover their valuables. "We've asked the Saudi prince to help us in getting back our ship," he said, referring to Abdullah bin Bandar bin Mohammed Al Saud, the Saudi foreign minister. "We've also asked for international support. We need help from other countries." The minister said that the seizure of the ship, which was carrying about £17m worth of fuel, had not been confirmed by the Maldives government yet. The vessel was seized from the port of Haddam in Saudi Arabia on Saturday by the security chief of the Saudi port, who said it had been found to be smuggling illegal goods. Rasheed said he was still waiting for a report from the Saudi ambassador. "We'll make sure that our government is receiving the vessel," he said. The vessel was reportedly a Sri Lankan-registered vessel called the Ghaleb. On Saturday, the Maldives president, Ibrahim Mohamed Solih, visited the Saudi embassy in the capital, Male, and took issue with the kingdom's claim that it was operating within national jurisdiction. Solih said that his country "does not recognise any statements ... which would deny Maldivian sovereignty over our territory". He called the claim of the security chief that the vessel was carrying contraband "baseless" and the claim that it was being detained on security grounds "unjustified". "We are a nation of law and order and we cannot accept any justification from anybody that threatens the rights of our citizens," he said. The foreign affairs minister, Ahmed Shareef, told reporters on Saturday that the Saudi and Bahraini authorities had informed the Maldives government about the seizure. The state-owned Saudi Press Agency said that the Sheikh Mohammed bin Abdullah Al Saud, the commander of the Eastern Province, and Abdullah bin Band
