Determining disk-loads using a combined ballistics test and wear curve approach. Wear areas on the surfaces of equine hoof shoes are indicators of the level of impact and loading experienced by the horse over a period of time. Together with the age of the shoe, these wear areas can be used to determine the horse's trotting distance at a specific age. Based on this information, the hoof should be recapped to the trotting distance indicated by the shoe. Wear charts are commonly used to document the progression of wear in hoof boots. The charts are often produced using a ballistics test, in which a 2.5-kg steel ball is dropped from a fixed height on to the shoe. A wear curve is then generated using the loading data collected as the ball is dropped from the fixed height. This approach enables the level of impact for a specific shoe to be determined, but requires that the shoe be removed from the horse. This can have a negative impact on owner and trainer behavior, and thus a means of determining wear should be investigated before such a chart is produced. In the current study, hoof boots were fitted to horses to evaluate how the loading of a shoe is related to areas of equine hoof wear. A novel approach was used to determine loading by drop testing (along with mathematical modeling) and the wear areas were then evaluated using a combined ballistics-wear curve approach. Results from the study confirmed that the loading determined by drop testing corresponds to areas of wear, indicating that the ballistics test could be used to determine loading. The utility of simultaneous tissue Doppler imaging and aortic root strain measurement for identification of increased aortic stiffness in patients with atrial fibrillation. The purpose of this study was to assess aortic stiffness index (SI) in patients with atrial fibrillation (AF) and to test the utility of a noninvasive measurement technique for the prediction of aortic stiffness. Aortic stiffness is an independent risk factor of atherosclerotic complications in AF patients and affects the prognosis of ischemic stroke. Noninvasive measurement of aortic stiffness using the carotid-femoral pulse wave velocity (PWV) is impractical because PWV is affected by aortic elasticity. Recently, tissue Doppler imaging (TDI) has proven useful in noninvasive assessment of aortic stiffness in patients with hypertension. We enrolled 113 patients ( $61 \pm 10$  years)

Harington, who recently starred in BBC One's Downton Abbey, will play Prince William in the drama series, which will also star Kelly Macdonald as his wife Catherine. The BBC and Netflix are creating a drama series about the personal and political lives of the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge. Harington, who recently starred in BBC One's Downton Abbey, will play Prince William in the drama series, which will also star Kelly Macdonald as his wife Catherine. "We are delighted to be working with the BBC on this very special project," Producer Graham Judd said. "Catherine and Prince William bring a huge warmth and humour to the world, and their story is a wonderful one to be told." Created by McCann London, the six-part drama will be based on the biographies published by former royal biographer Robert Hardman. "People in the UK, and indeed the whole world, are fascinated by the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge," said BBC Director of Content Charlotte Moore. "They are acutely aware of the extraordinary privilege of working for an institution they love. We hope this series, told by this exceptional team, will bring an insight into what life is like at the heart of the British establishment." Harington, who previously starred as Ned Stark in Game Of Thrones, also starred in ITV's now-ended miniseries War And Peace. He is repped by UTA and Independent Talent Group.ly, the results for the two case studies indicate that the panicle type, fracture type, and mean transverse stress do not have an effect on the increase in particle sintering and the decrease in compressive strength. Therefore, the optimum sintering temperature is determined based on the purpose of using the sintered ceramics. In the case of buildings, it is necessary to consider the increase in the fire-resistivity of the sintered ceramics by decreasing the compressive strength. According to the three cases in the fire experiments, the sample with an initial strength of 5 MPa shows a considerable increase in residual strength after the fire test, and the residual strength of the sample with the lowest strength increases to 90%. On the other hand, in a case of a space application, it is important to increase the strength, since the sintered ceramics are used as substitutes for materials and structures
