Milton Keynes Milton Keynes is a historic market town and civil parish in South East England. It had a population of 202,900 at the time of the 2011 census. The town is located approximately 45 miles to the south-west of London and 10 miles from the county town of Bedford. It lies within the Aylesbury Vale in the south of Buckinghamshire and is close to the A421 (the M1) and the M6 motorways.

Milton Keynes is an unparished area. Its civic centre is the historic Market Square and most of the development in Milton Keynes occurred there in the 1970s-1990s. It has a number of large retail parks in the east, but the town centre is dominated by office buildings. The town is in the parliamentary constituency of Milton Keynes South, which has been represented by the Conservative MP Phillip Ham. At the last election in 2010, the Liberal Democrats gained the seat from the Conservatives with a majority of 0.8%. History The town of Milton Keynes was founded in 1967. It was built in the centre of a large greenfield area: by the late 1990s it was clear that housing development and town growth was no longer centred on the town's boundaries and it was decided to split Milton Keynes into two.
